Eating healthy can be expensive once you increase the amount of vegetables, fruits, or organic foods you consume. However, look no further because there is a new juice bar coming to Medford.

Olivia's Juice and Acai Bar is set to open around late February 2020 at 56 Station Landing. Owners Neil 'Romeo' Paris and Chris Butts are currently working through the permitting process with the city.

Olivia's is being designed by award-winning local architect Prellwitz Chilinski Associates (PCA) and will seat up to 45 people. Olivia's will be providing an inviting and comfortable environment to help make their guests feel at home.

The idea came from life-long friends Paris and Butts, who felt "there was a lack" of affordable and healthy food options in the area.

"We were looking for healthy food options around here," Paris said.

And Olivia's was born.

The menu will consist of made to order juices and smoothies, gourmet acai bowls, a fresh salad bar, artisan toasts and will even have bottled cold pressed juices. Olivia's also will provide three stage juice cleanse programs and offers catering as well.

"Everything is made of fresh high quality ingredients to keep it really delicious and healthy, while keeping it at reasonable prices," Paris said, adding he's "most excited to bring this type of food to people in the Medford area because there is nothing really like Olivia's around."

Having been on several Boston radio stations over the years, Paris is no stranger to the area or the food options.

While the Medford location isn't even off the ground yet, the two friends have an overall plan to expand Olivia's to more than just one location, and are currently in the process of bringing one to Cambridge as well.
